The character and associations of the principal parties in the painful affair; the standing in society occupied by the unfortunate wife and mother, both here and in her maiden home; the luxury and affluence of the home whence she had passed forth, stained and disgraced; the position of the dishonored husband, were all of such a class as to cause these revelations to fall with startling effect upon the entire compunity. It will be seen that Mr. Burch has amended the first bill, which amendment we present entire. In a brief paragraph a few days since we stated that the hearing of the case would occupy the Circuit Court at some time during its present session, and this is true.

That the family friends of the unfortunate woman have espoused her cause and will defend the same in our coarts, is true, and it is also true that on neither side will aught be lacking that ample wealth can procure not only to carry investigation to the fullest extent, but, in so doing, render the trial one of the most remarkable and painful in the annals of our courts. We are justified in the belief and assertion that it has been Mr. Burch's desire and that of his counsel to avoid such publicity, but being forced upon them, their course is sufficiently well authenticated in advance. To a wilful, designing and perverse misconstruction of their motives is due the origin of the widely-spread rumors to which, in this present issue from the authentic records of our courts, an effectual quietus is given.

Mr. Burch has presented to the court an amended complaint, which, after stating the circumstances of his marriage in May, 1848, and the birth of his two children, your orator further avows that he is informed and believes, and charges the truth to be that the said Mary W., disregarding the solemnity of the marriage ow, has since the marriage of your orator with her committed adultery at divers places; and especially that the said Mary W. on or about the fourteenth day of and 9:50 P. From Cheney's position it was impossible for him to do it; but with the greatest presence of mind, he took the only course that could save him from instant death; he lay flat beside the log they were trying to wheel, and the rolling log passed over him, borne up chiefly by the log lying still. But somehow his foot was raised too much, or the ground was too high where it was placed, or a bunch projected from the correspondent says of the famous old Spanish city of Seville:

The rarest paintings are to be found at the Cathedral, the Museum and the University, although the visitor not unfrequently stumbles upon gens of art in his wanderings in various parts of the city. It is in Seville's Cathedral that the much admired painting of Murillo, the "San Antonio," is kept in state. It was greatly desired by the late Duke of Wellington, who offered an almost flabulous sum for it, but the Spanish Government refused to part with it for any consideration.

More than half the city is still of Moorish architecture, and palaoes sud howers are yet extant which richly repay examination to the lovers of antiquity. Indeed, I knew mot a rarer pleasure for him imbued with love of the past than to wander through its quaint old streets, amid its Moorish and Gothic remains. One of the most notable of its many Moslem towers is the Giraldis so termed from its beautiful vane, which veers with every wind. The architecture of this belifty, which is unique in Europe, has excited much admiration from travelers. Its purpose was to call the faithful to prayers, and it was, in consequence, highly venerated by the Moslem. On its top were, originally, four stupendous balls, and bell still banging on the great belifty, but the muezzin no longer summons to prayer, and the power of the Moslem is brooken.

Amusements is Paris and London.—There much, or the ground was too high where it was placed, or a bunch projected from the rolling log, and the small bone of his right leg, a little above the ankle, was broken, and the heel severely bruised.

This political division extends to AMUSEMENTS IN PARIS AND LONDON.—There are thirty-five opera-houses, theaters and hyppodromes in the city of Paris, with its 1,220,000 inhabitants. In the city of London, with about 2,000,000 inhabitants, there are twenty-seven similar places of amusement.

The Alleged Wife-Murder in New Jersey. Trial of the Rev. Jacob Harden for the Nefarious Crime.

The Alleged Wife-Murder in New Jersey, Trial of the Rev. Jacob Harden for the Nefarlous Orime.

The trial of the Rev. Jacob Harden, charged with the murder of his wife, is now in progress at Belvidere, N. J. The trial has been twice postponed, but at the present term the jury was impanneled and the present term the jury was impanneled and the present term the jury was impanneled and the present term the prosecution. Mr. Harden was the son of Jacob Harden, in Blairstown; the poisoned wife was the daughter of a Mr. Durling of the same place. They were schoolmates when young, and intimate. Their intimacy was broken and they separated for some time until they again were found together at Mt. Lebanon, on the borders of Warren, Hunterdon. Here the acquaintance was renewed and resulted in marriage. Did not go to housekeeping. Mrs. Harden was sent for a few days before her death, by her husband, to stay with him at the residence of Mr. Ramsey, where he was boarding, until she died. Her parents at once went to the scene of her death on the 9th of March, and their suspicions of foul means, by various circumstances, were excited. Proceedings were immediately instituted to ferret out the mystery.

When Mr. Harden was looked for he was not to be found, and was next beard of at the village of Fairmount, Va., where he was arrested on or about the 17th of March, 1859, and lodged in the jail of this county. It will not be be denied by the defense that the death of Hannah S. Harden was violent, and after mature deliberation by grand inquisition of the county, Mr. Harden has been charged as the guilty party in legal form. To sustain the charge, it will be provided that Mr. Harden sought and cultivated the intimacy with the deceased; this resulted in a matri-monial engagement about the list of June, 1859. During the actumn Mr. Harden manifested by his acts a desire to break the engagement. A correspondence between them ensued, which will be produced. The difficulties became public and entered the church. The result was a meeting a

After the marriage his conduct toward her was that of coldness and neglect. Mrs. Harden enjoyed good health until a short time before her death. Visited her husband at Mr. Ramsey's, (his boarding place) two, three or four times before that which proved the last. The last time Mr. Harden sent on for her she was in good health and spirits. Then commenced her sickness. Mr. Ramsey was away from home. Mrs. Ramsey had just recovered from sickness. Her only assistance a Miss Smith. On Tuesday night she was taken sick, and vomited on Wednesday also. Wednesday night slept in Mrs. Ramsey's room and was up several times in the night. Thursday came down, and laid upon the lounge, took her meals regular. On Friday she was sick, and desired him to take her home. He desired her to stay over Sunday, or until he came from New York. Went to church on Sunday. On Monday was well, and worked. On Tuesday morning did not get up to hreakfast. Mrs. Harden said she was taken to vomiting about midnight. Harden gave her powders in milk on Tuesday. On Wednesday, ten minutes before two o'clock P. M., she died. Harden made no effort to save her. He gave contradictory accounts of the cause of her death, and in some cases professed entire ignorance of the cause. He czhibited indecent haste in securing her burial, desiring to have her funeral a little more than twenty-four hours after her death. An Indian Tale in Brief-A Very Romantic

An Indian Tate in Brief-A Very Romantic History of the Colonial Times.

The following incident in the life of the grand-father of the late Governor Caleb Strong, of Massachusetts, is quite romantic. "He had paid some attention to Mary (daughter of Capt. John) Sheldon, of Deerfield, Mass., and there was love, but no engagement between them. On the fatal 29th of February, 1704, she was taken prisoner by the French and Indians, and carried to Canada, where she remained two or three years. It is stated that the first question she asked of those who came to redeem her was, whether Jonathan Strong was married. He was married—her return being considered of those who came to redeem her was, whether Jonathan Strong was married. He was married—her return being considered very uncertain. After her return, she also married. But in 1761, her husband and Mr. Strong's wife both died; and these aged persons—he in his 80th year, and she in her 76th—renewed their attachment, after a lapse of fifty-eight years, and were married in 1762." Sylvester Judd. Esq., of Northampton, says that a third of a century ago, people were living in Northampton who had seen the venerable couple ride through the streets of that town; she seated on a pillion behind her husband.

The conservative party, on the other hand, contend for a rigorous adhesion to the old rites and customs. The progressive party is constantly increasing in number and becoming more powerful, and is destined to create an entire change in the internal policy of that Empire, unless foreign governments, by indiscreet acts of their officials, should check its progress by entering into open hostillities with the nation. It has been reported that the late Emperor of Japan committed suicide on account of these political contests and proposed innovations on the old regime. This is incorrect; he died a natural death, and Happiness.

A few well-authenticated instances are recorded of criminals who have been restored to consciousness after having suffered at the hands of the hangman, One of the most interesting of these cases occurred in Paris in 1766. In that year, a young girl of very prepossosing appearance, from one of the interior provinces of France, was placed at Paris, in the service of a man depraved by all the vices of that corrupt metropolis. Smitten with her charms, he attempted her ruin, but was unsuccessful. Inconsed at his defeat, he determined on revenge, and, in furtherance of his design, secretly placed in her trank articles belonging to him and marked with his name. He then denounced her to a magistrate, who caused her to be arrested, and the missing articles being found in her possession, she was brought to trial. In her defense she could only assert her ignorance of the manner in which the property came into her trunk, and protest her innocence. She was found guilty, and the sentence of death was pronounced upon her. The hangman s office was inefficiently performed, it being the first attempt of the executioner's son. The body was delivered into the hands of a surgeon, by whom it had been purchased. He immediately conveyed it home, and was proceeding to dissect it, when he perceived a slight warmth about the heart. By the prompt use of proper remedies, he restored the suspended animation. In the meantime he had sent for a trustworthy priest, and when the unfortunate girl opened her eyes she supposed herself in another world, and, addressing the priest, (who was aman of marked and majestic countenance,) exclaimed: "Eternal Father! you know my innocence; have pity on me." In her simplicity believing she beheld her Maker, she continued to sue for mercy, and it was some time before she realized she was still in the land of the living. The surgeon and priest being fully convinced of her innocence, she retired to a village far distant from the scene of her unjust punishment, where she afterward married, and liv on Sunday, the 8th. The proceedings were tame, and there were not more than a thousand present.

Heenan was before the magistrate at Derby on the 7th, charged with the intention of engaging in a prize fight, thereby causing a breach of peace. Mr. Leech appeared in his behalf, and said Heenan had never broken the peace in England, and had no intention of doing so.

True, he may have made use of such language in the excitement of his capture, when his passion was aroused, but when he considered he had been hunted out of eight counties, while his opponent, Sayers, was allowed to go with the greatest impunity, he did feel sore at the treatment he was receiving. He apologized if he used expressions which he ought not. Two gentlemen were ready to give hail to the amount required.

of the house of Rothschild, who it is said has an interest in Douglas of a pecuniary nature. The Herald's Washington correspondent says: There is a report that W. W. Corcorac, the banker, and Senators Slidell and Bright, have left for Charleston with the intentica, if necessary, of investing, between them, two million dollars to defeat Douglas. Corcoran can spare one million, and Slidell and Bright half a million each, and not feel it much; so the knowing ones in financial circles assert. The Tribund's Charleston correspondent says: The New York Softs have organized formally by electing Dean Richmond Chair.

says: The New York Softs have organized formally, by electing Dean Richmond Chairman, and Peter Cagger and James C. Spencer, of Ga., Lawrence County, as Secretaries. The three seats claimed by John Clancy, August Belmont and Johnson, to fill vacancies in the New York city delegation, and one vacancy in the place of Sidney Lawrence, of Franklin County, were referred to a committee consisting of Isaac Fowler, Edwin Creswell, Sandford E. Church, Lemuel Stebon and Wm. F. Russell, who will report to-morrow morning at nine o'clock.

Bigler was elected chairman over Ex-Senator Brodhead, by a vote of 28 to 23, there being three absentees.

This is only an expression of personal preference, and no practical test of the pro-clivities of the delegation.

Glosbrenner and Cassidy were chosen Sec-retaries, and Mr. Dawson Spokesman An important point was a resolution offered by Mr. Phillips, that the delegation should vote as a unit in the Convention. This movement, though not expected, was de-nounced by Congressman Montgomery as a surprise. He said he would not permit his vote to be cast by another, and threatened to Douglas a friends from the North-west and elsewhere met at their headquarters last night, and proclaimed the alternative of his nomination or the defeat of the party.

The Times's correspondent says: "The feeling for and against Wood's delegation is intense. The National Committee bare decided to give the tickets of admission to the other wing. Rumor says that Wood has been reinforced by the presence of fifty fighting men from New York, and that he will attempt a coup d'etat. His friends deny that he will appeal from the decision of the committee. The Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Rhode Island delegates are counted as sure for Douglas."

Himself.—At a recent prayer meeting in Boston a gentleman made a statement of a sad case of gambling and suicide which of a sad case of gambling and suicide which occurred on board the steamer Empire State. A party of men who appeared to be professional gamblers were playing cards in the cabin, and urging the bystanders to bet upon the cards. They induced one man, who had been apparently interested in the game, to put down forty dollars, and by one turn of the cards it was swept into the gambler's pocket. The loser appeared to be much agitated, and was seen soon after to go out on the deck, and in a few moments afterward jumped overboard and was lost. It is supposed that the chagrin and mortification which filled his mind when he came to reflect how foolishly he had lost his money, led him to commit the act.

which it attributed to Heenan's companions getting a place where they were almost certain of arrest.

A subsequent edition exonerates Heenan, and says he took all necessary precaution, employing a man to sound the police and put them off the track. This person deceived Heenan and his friends, and gave information that led to his arrest.

Bell's Life indignantly scouts the idea that Sayers or his friends caused the arrest, and states that Heenan's party believed Sayers utterly incapable of such conduct.

It was considered certain that the fight would come off on the day fixed, the 18th.

France.—An Imperial Commissioner was traveling through the neutralized provinces of Sardinia, and is said to have been cordially received in some places.

Recently, Warren Burbank, residing at Madison, Wisconsin, took a team and went to his father's house, at Primrose, for the purpose of bringing back some provisions. During the night, Burbank's wagon was taken to pieces and part of it carried off, and the horses badly mutilated. Burbank then obtained another wagon, loaded it with provisions, and started to return to Madison. As he arrived at Mount Vernon, two persons, with their faces masked and otherwise disguised, stepped out of the woods into the road; one of them seized the horses by the bits, the other went behind and around the load, setting the hay on fire. The horses were held until the flames of the burning hay rushed up and around the boys. It was with difficulty that the little lad could be induced to leave the load, being more afraid of the assailants than the fire blazing around him. The elder boy undertook to get the horses loosed from the load, but was immediately knocked down with a club, and the horses kicked and beaten to make them run away with the burning load, the persons in disguise then leaving suddenly themselves. The horses were overtaken on the top of a high hill, close to Mount Vernon. The boy succeeded in cutting the horses loose from the burning load, but not until they were seriously burned and rendered almost valueless. of Sardinia, and is said to have been cordially received in some places.

The government had reprimanded the Pays and Patrie for giving curreacy to the report that England was blameable for the outbreaks in Spain and Italy.

Last night in the Eldorado Billiard Saloon a difficulty occurred between two men named Wm. Myers and Charles Skinner, growing out of insulting language used by the latter toward the former. Skinner, who was con-siderably intoxicated at the time, assailed Myers with a number of most approbrious epithets, which induced the latter to strike him a blow with a billiard cue. Parties here interfered and the combatants were separated. After the hostile meeting last night we learn that Skinner informed a number of persons

On arriving in front of the cigar store at the east end of the Worthe cigar store at the east end of the Worsham House building, Skinner suddenly turned around, and drawing a pistol, presented it at Myers's breast and fired. The ball took effect in Myers's left breast, immediately above the heart, and after uttering one or two groans, the wounded man staggered back and fell on the pavement.
